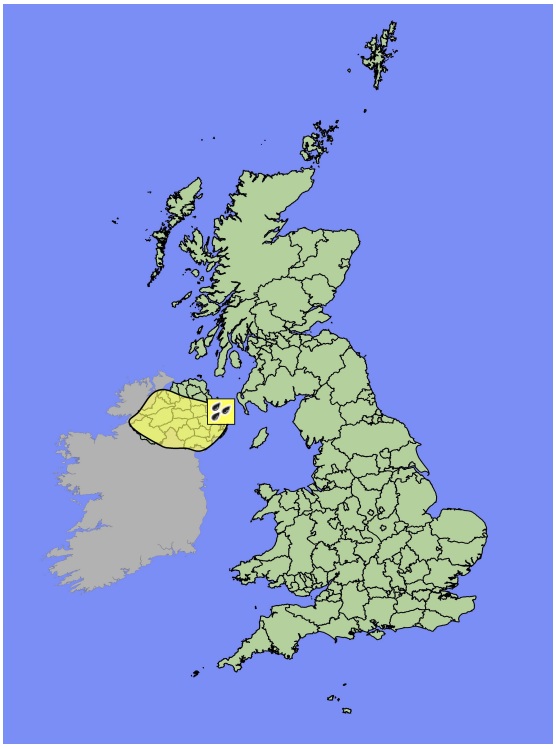
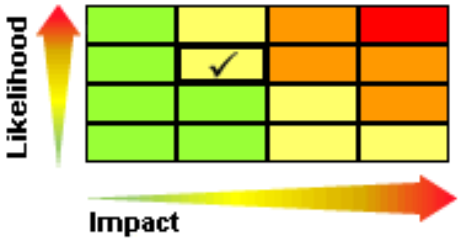
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers are beginning to develop across Northern Ireland and will become heavy and thundery this afternoon, before slowly dying out this evening. With only light winds, the showers will be fairly slow-moving and could give locally 25mm of rain in 3 hours or less.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 13:30 on Wed, 06th Jun 2012 until 21:00 on Wed, 06th Jun 2012

Heavy slow moving showers will affect parts of Northern Ireland this afternoon and evening, giving isolated thundery downpours. The public should be aware that some localised flooding or standing water may develop at prone spots making driving conditions hazardous.
